The American University Law School

The American University was chartered in 1893 by the U. S. Congress with Presidential approval. The original 75-acre campus in the northwest section of the District of Columbia was selected with the conviction that a physical proximity to the nation's capital is an invaluable asset to an educational institution devoted specifically to graduate study. Today the University, with students enrolled from all 50 states and approximately 80 foreign countries, embraces the College of Arts and Sciences, Washington College of Law, School of Business Administration, School of Government and Public Administration, School of International Service, College of Continuing Education, and the School of Nursing. The Washington College of Law, which merged with the University in 1949, was established in 1896 primarily to permit women as well as men to pursue professional studies. The founding principles of the Law School and the University concerning equal opportunity and the melding of graduate study with the unique characteristics of the national capital continue to play a critical role in The American University's operation and development.

The lawyer has long been recognized as uniquely suited to facilitate dispute resolution and to effectuate organizations, programs and policies pertaining to the activities of a society. However, the complexities now inherent in these activities require, ever increasingly, that law students assimilate non-legal material to maintain the unique confidence of their fellow man. Legal education in Washington, D. C. permits the broadest possible student exposure to the infinite scope of people, institutions, concepts and processes relevant to the existence and improvement of our complex society. The Law School recognizes this environmental potential and seeks to implement a formal curriculum and supplemental educational activities that will facilitate student appreciation of the elements that are basic to our society and reflected in the Washington environment. This exposure insures that our students will continue to enjoy the broad confidence that individuals and institutions traditionally have placed in lawyers.

The John Sherman Myers Law Building with adjoining Hutchins Hall is a modern, integrated complex designed to facilitate effective law study and research. Class, seminar and court rooms, Faculty and student activity offices, administrative offices, and lounges are arranged to promote constructive interaction among students, Faculty and staff, and to provide basic materials for reference during such interaction. The main law library is located and designed to minimize distractions while providing students and Faculty with convenient access to a full complement of more than 70,000 volumes of primary and secondary materials in domestic, foreign and international law, and other study areas. The main University library is located in adjacent Battelle-Tompkins Library, and the world's most comprehensive complex of general and specialized libraries and other reference and archive facilities are accessible to students within fifteen to thirty minutes by various transportation modes.

The Faculty embodies a broad spectrum of experience, specialties, ages, personal philosophies and teaching methods. Such diversity is inherent in the School's basic objectives, as is the compatibility with which these diverse elements constructively interact. The students are expected to take advantage of this diversity by understanding views expressed, formulating and projecting constructive comments thereon, and infusing relevant, creative ideas. The student is also encouraged to respond in a similar fashion to fellow students and to the diversely disciplined individuals from other schools of the University and from the Washington area.

Programs of Instruction

The degree of Juris Doctor is awarded to students who (1) have satisfactorily completed not less than eighty semester hours of courses including all courses required by the Law Faculty; (2) have been in attendance for at least six resident semesters of law study, the last two of which must be at the Law School; and (3) have been recommended for the degree by the Law Faculty. Satisfactory completion of twelve semester hours constitutes a resident semester, and a semester hour is equivalent to one hour of class-work per week for a period of fifteen weeks.

The Law School offers a full-time and a part-time program leading to the degree of Juris Doctor. Students in the full-time program must take twelve to fourteen semester hours of courses each semester so as to permit fulfillment of degree requirements in three academic years. Every full-time student is expected to attain a level of achievement in each course that reflects his full potential, and consequently he may not devote more than twenty hours per week during the fall and spring semesters to employment activities, with or without compensation.

Students in the part-time program must take eight to ten semester hours of courses in each of the fall and spring semesters and five to six semester hours, as may be prescribed, during each summer session following the first and second academic years of attendance. Thus, degree requirements for part-time students should be satisfied in four academic years and two intervening summer sessions.

A student, while enrolled at the Law School, will be given no credit toward the Juris Doctor degree for work at any other educational institution or in any other division of the University, nor may he engage in such course work unless specific written permission is obtained in advance from the Dean of the Law School. Furthermore, a student is not permitted to transfer from the day to evening program or vice versa without special written approval from the Dean.

The Law School and the School of Business Administration have jointly established a plan under which students may pursue a four-year course that satisfies the requirements for both the Juris Doctor and Master in Business Administration degrees awarded by The American University. Information for further details of this program may be obtained by writing to Professor Egon Guttman, The American University Law School, Washington, D. C. 20016.

Curriculum

The complexities of the law defy comprehension in a lifetime, much less in several years, and thus the Law School is dedicated to endowing its students primarily with a sound grasp of basic legal institutions, methodologies, principles and the catalysts for their evolution. The law course curriculum provides the core structure for systematic student exploration and enlightenment in anticipation of professional work in the law or a wide variety of other disciplines involving the essential forces of human progress. Supplementary activities permit individual emphasis on particular facets of legal training and professional responsibilities.

Fundamental preparation for the practice of law and for scholarly work in the law requires scheduled exposure to a combination of basic legal subject-matter, and this requirement is reflected in the first-year curriculum developed by the Faculty and students. During the succeeding years each student is responsible for selecting, in consultation with the Faculty, courses that will best cultivate his own talents and promote his professional aspirations. Bar admission requirements, undergraduate training, desires for specialization and related factors are generally important criteria for student determinations and Faculty counseling regarding the selection and sequencing of each student's elective courses and seminars after the first year.

Set forth below is a brief description of the required first-year courses and the elective courses and seminars for the second and third years currently being offered at the Law School.

Research, Fellowships and Lectures

Individual members of the Law School community frequently engage in specialized research in connection with the preparation of publications, seminars, and testimony. Also, group research and study projects have been or are being undertaken in the areas of rehabilitation, criminal justice, business-government relations and Latin American affairs. Student participation, which is a vital component of these projects, constitutes an extremely valuable intellectual experience for highly qualified and specially motivated students.

Each year five upper-class students who have demonstrated superior scholastic proficiency and exceptional competence in legal research and writing are awarded the Dean's Fellowships. The Dean's Fellows, who are given full-tuition scholarships for the succeeding year, participate with the Law Faculty in a year-long seminar that focuses on the theories and techniques of legal research, expression and teaching. In connection with this seminar work, the Fellows, under the guidance of a Faculty member, acquire clinical experience by association with first-year student efforts involving legal research and analysis.

The Edwin A. Mooers Lectureship, established in honor of a distinguished member of the Law Faculty since 1918, is held each spring by a prominent scholar who comments on a topic of contemporary significance. Holders of the lectureship have been the late Roscoe Pound, Dean Emeritus of Harvard Law School; The Honorable Charles E. Clark, former Judge of the Federal Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit; Ralph A. Newman, Professor at Hastings Law School of the University of California; Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren E. Burger; J. Lee Rankin, former General Counsel to the President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy; Charles B. Nutting, former Dean of the National Law Center of The George Washington University; Allen E. Throop, former General Counsel of the Communications Satellite Corporation; and The Honorable Abe Fortas, former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Other Educational Activities

The American University Law Review is a legal journal edited and published by law school students selected on the basis of scholarship and the ability to do creative research and writing. The quarterly issues of the Law Review go to the federal and state courts and administrative agencies, the nation's law schools and numerous other institutions and individuals responsible for practicing and shaping the law. The students, as part of their overall publishing responsibilities, write comments and notes on legal developments and significant cases, as well as critically evaluate and edit the lead articles and book reviews written by teachers, lawyers, judges, legislators and other scholars. Membership on the staff of the Law Review is universally recognized in the legal profession as both an honor and a unique educational experience.

Legal Aid Services permits qualified students to assist practicing attorneys and legal administrators in the Washington Metropolitan area in their representation and handling of indigents involved in a broad variety of legal problems. Participating students become exposed to valuable clinical experiences under the supervision of such attorneys and administrators, and in some instances are permitted to argue specific legal matters before various courts in the area. The American Bar Association, for the past two years, has recognized the Law School's Legal Aid program as the "most outstanding Student Bar project in the United States." The program is supervised by a student Board of Directors in consultation with a Faculty advisor.

The Law School newspaper is a student publication which provides the Law School community and its alumni with news and commentary on contemporary legal problems and other items of related interest. Membership on the newspaper's staff provides unique experience concerning creative investigation and expression. The American Bar Association has accorded special recognition to the newspaper.

The Student Bar Association, affiliated with the American Bar Association and composed of all students at the Law School, is responsible for designing and implementing a broad variety of activities to foster the moral, intellectual and social development of its members. The Association's student officers and delegates direct its multi-faceted functions and provide essential liaison among the diverse elements of the Law School and the professional bar so as to insure relevant responses to the needs of the students, Faculty, University and profession.

Moot Court is a professional term traditionally used to denote experience in written and oral advocacy in trial and appellate environments. The Law School offers several opportunities, in addition to curriculum offerings, for such experience and for recognition of notable achievement in this area. The Student Bar Association conducts an oral argument competition open to all students. The New York City Bar Association and American Society of International Law individually sponsor national appellate argument competitions in which the Law School is represented by specially selected students. Regional competitions are used to determine the finalists who argue before judges and lawyers of national repute. Participation in these two competitions is a nationally recognized honor.

Law Wives Club, the organization for the wives of law students, sponsors social, intellectual and charitable activities for its members, and provides valuable assistance to various Law School activities.

Professional Fraternities have established chapters at the Law School which sponsor professional and social activities for their law student memberships. The fraternities include Beta Chapter of Phi Delta Delta, Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi, John W. Davis Senate of Delta Theta Phi, Louis D. Brandeis Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta, and John F. Kennedy Inn of Phi Delta Phi.

Memorials, Awards and Prizes

The following memorials, awards and prizes have been established at the Law School to recognize individuals and entities having a special relationship to the school and/or having demonstrated special competence in particular aspects of law school work.

American Law Book Company Award for the student in each class who has made the most significant contribution toward overall legal scholarship.

Association of Plaintiffs' Trial Attorneys of Metropolitan Washington Prize for the student excelling in the field of trial advocacy. This award is presented annually to a student from one of the five area law schools.

Bureau of National Affairs Award for the most significant progress during the senior year.

Don Monroe Casto Memorial Award in Constitutional Law for the highest grade in the course on Constitutional Law.

Foundation Press Award for the woman student who has contributed most substantially to student activities.

Gillett Prize for the graduate with the highest scholastic course average.

International Academy of Trial Lawyers Advocacy Award presented to the graduating senior who has demonstrated outstanding ability in courtroom advocacy.

John W. Davis Senate, Delta Theta Phi Scholastic Award for the outstanding male student with the highest scholastic average in both the part-time and full-time divisions at the end of his first year.

Kappa Beta Phi Award for the woman student with the highest average in her graduating class, provided by the Xi Alumnae Chapter.

Kappa Beta Pi Prize for the woman student achieving the highest scholastic average in her first year of study.

Lawyers Co-operative Publishing Company and Bancroft-Whitney Company Awards for the students receiving the highest grade in various subjects.

Lura E. Turley Prize for the best work by women students published in the Law Review.

Mooers Trophy for the outstanding student in Trial Practice Court.

Admission Information

Students can provide the University community with the sensitivity required to insure that its courses and supplemental educational activities are continually responsive and relevant to each student's highest intellectual and moral aspirations as well as the requirements of various professions, communities, and state, national and international entities. Consequently, the Law School expects its students to utilize the human and physical resources of the University with a high degree of proficiency and to make individual contributions to the progressive evolution of such resources. This participatory educational philosophy requires the selection of mature students whose history reflects high scholastic achievement, legal aptitude and individual initiative.

First-Year Class

Students are admitted only in the Fall Semester. Application for admission to the full-time or part-time Juris Doctor program may be made by students who will have received a Bachelor's degree or its equivalent from an approved college and will have taken the Law School Admission Test prior to beginning their study in the Law School. To insure timely consideration of his request for admission each student should file his application accompanied by the $15 fee and make arrangements for the Law School to receive all his official transcripts and test score preferably by January 1, and in any event before April 1, of the year law study is expected to commence. The admission application and pertinent instructions are included with this Bulletin.

All applications are subject to the approval of the Faculty, and students are selected principally upon the basis of the competence and progress reflected in all their college records, the material furnished in their applications for admission, and the results shown on the Law School Admission Test. The consideration of applications begins in December, and most of the admissions are made by April. If applications and/or supporting transcripts and test scores are received after April 1, they are considered only to the extent spaces may be available, but are not likely to be considered if received in completed form after May 31.

The application and application fee should be sent directly by the applicant; official transcripts and Law School Admission Test scores should be sent directly by the issuing institution to the Director of Admissions, Room 101, Myers Hall, The American University Law School, Washington, D.C. 20016. Arrangements should be made by the applicant with the Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, New Jersey, to take the Law School Admission Test no later than in the February of the calendar year for which admission is requested. The test customarily is given four times a year — in November, February, April and August.

Advanced Standing

A student who has pursued law study at another approved law school may be admitted to the full-time or part-time Juris Doctor program in the Fall, Spring or Summer Semesters if his undergraduate record and his Law School Admission Test score would have made him admissible to the first-year class and if his law work is of high quality. The amount of credit given by the Law School for law study completed elsewhere and the conditions of admission with advanced standing are subject to approval by the Law School Faculty. A prerequisite for admission with advanced standing is satisfactory completion of two resident semesters of work, or the equivalent thereof, at an approved law school. An applicant must submit all data required for admission of first-year students.

Unclassified Students and Auditors

Graduate students, students of other approved law schools, members of the bar, and other qualified individuals may apply to the Director of Admissions for admission to particular courses offered at the Law School in the Fall, Spring or Summer Semesters. Such admission, which is limited and subject to approval of the Law School Faculty, may be permitted for the purpose of auditing or earning credit for transfer to other schools.

Performance Evaluation

The Law School's requirement that each student exploit his full potential for legal study necessitates an optimum comprehension of all assigned materials for each course and a satisfactory demonstration of such comprehension in written assignments, during classes and examination sessions. Furthermore, each student is expected to discharge his obligation to fellow students by full compliance with the rules and regulations applicable at the Law School and by providing intelligent insights into problems under discussion in and out of class. The privilege of membership in the Law School may be withdrawn from a student who fails to meet these obligations to the Law School community and himself.

A law student's performance in each course is normally expressed in terms of the following letter grades which have numerical equivalents for computation purposes: A or 3; B+ or 2.5; B or 2; C+ or 1.5; C or 1; D or .5; and F or 0. A minimum course grade of D or .5 is required before credit may be received for a particular course. A minimum weighted grade average of 1.0 for each academic year and the total six resident semesters is a prerequisite to continuation in the Law School and to candidacy for the Juris Doctor degree. The Law Faculty will dismiss a student who fails to maintain the minimum academic average or who, in its opinion, does not properly discharge his obligation as a participant in the Law School.

Basic elements of performance evaluation at the Law School vary with regard to courses and Faculty members, but they generally focus on class participation, research skills and written responses to examination questions, problems assigned during a course and research topics.

Services for Students and Graduates

Placement at the Law School is supervised by the Placement Office to facilitate each student's selection of suitable employment. Students are personally interviewed by the director, who maintains records which permit correlation of student interests with placement opportunities and who provides appropriate information on bar requirements, fellowships and judicial clerkships. In addition, students are furnished with information on part-time and summer employment, and openings in law offices, corporations, government offices, courts and other institutions. Potential employers are encouraged to interview students at the Law School, thereby permitting students to acquire conveniently information on various types of legal work and to make selections most compatible with their respective talents and aspirations.

Housing on the University's campus is limited to undergraduate students and their graduate student resident advisors. Information on non-University accommodations proximate to the campus may be obtained by visiting the University Housing Office on campus. The University provides law students with a full complement of dining and refreshment facilities, and arrangements can be made for board contracts.

Health Services for minor sickness and health treatment of full-time students are handled by the University Infirmary. More complex illness and diagnostic requirements are referred to Sibley Memorial Hospital located near the campus, and the costs are borne by the student. All full-time students are required to submit a medical history prior to their initial registration and they are also urged to participate in the University's group Student Accident and Sickness Insurance Plan which assists in covering the cost of extensive medical treatment.

Recreation opportunities encompass a broad variety of spectator and participatory sports, theater, music, lectures and discussion groups, and the normal complement of student union facilities. The Law School community is expected to seek some identification with other elements of the University and thus further develop and enrich itself in a comprehensive sense.

Religious Groups are an integral part of the University, and a variety of services are held regularly at the Kay Spiritual Life Center adjacent to the Law School under the direction of the University Chaplain.

Tuition, Fees and Financial Aid

Tuition for full-time students (twelve credit hours and above) during the 1970-71 academic year is $840 per semester. For part-time and all summer session students tuition is $64 per registered credit hour. Deferred payments for tuition may be arranged under appropriate conditions so as to distribute tuition payments throughout each semester. The non-refundable $100 admission deposit required from each beginning student immediately following acceptance is credited against his first semester tuition charge.

Given a continuation of the current economic conditions as well as the need to continue and accelerate academic growth of the University, it can be reasonably expected that tuition and fee increases within a 5-10% range will be required each foreseeable year beyond 1970-71.

Prorated cancellation of tuition charges may be allowed after an executed withdrawal form provided by the Law School Registrar is received and signed by the Office of Student Accounts. A student permitted or requested to withdraw from classes during the Fall or Spring Semester is entitled to a cancellation of charges for tuition in accordance with the schedule below. (The first week of a semester begins on the official opening date of the semester, and withdrawal occurs on the date the withdrawal form is signed by the Office of Student Accounts.) Students who discontinue class attendance but do not officially withdraw during the cancellation period will be responsible for payment of the full amount of the applicable tuition and fees.

Withdrawal during the first week of semester	100%
	less $5
Withdrawal during the second week of semester	80%
Withdrawal during the third and fourth weeks
of semester	60%
Withdrawal during the fifth week of semester	40%
Withdrawal during the sixth week of semester	20%
Withdrawal after the sixth week of semester	None

A refund of 60% tuition will be made in the Summer Session if the forms are presented to the Office of Student Accounts by the end of the second week of classes. No other refunds will be made during the summer session.

Fees required to be paid along with each semester's tuition are a General Fee of $15 ($6 for Summer Session) and a Health Fee of $20 (required of all full-time law students and of all others who wish to use infirmary facilities). In addition, special fees are payable in connection with Admission Application ($15), late registration ($10), late payment of financial obligations ($10), special examinations, and official transcripts.

Financial Aid for meeting the costs of Law School study are available to qualified students in a variety of forms. Listed below are the major scholarship and loan funds now available, and further information concerning their applicability to individual circumstances may be obtained by writing the Director of Admissions, The American University Law School, Washington, D.C. 20016. All students requiring financial aid must file an application or otherwise contact the Director of Admissions at least four months prior to date such financial assistance is required. However, new applicants should not apply for scholarship assistance until after they have been accepted for admission.

The Dean's Scholarships, established by friends of the Law School and The American University, provide tuition assistance for full-time students. They are awarded for each academic year and are renewable upon the basis of achievement and maintenance of high scholastic performance.

The Dean's Fellowships, awarded annually to five students who have demonstrated exceptional proficiency in legal research and writing, provide full tuition. For further information see section on Fellowships.

Grace Markel Daish Scholarship. The income of this fund given by Grace Markel Daish provides tuition assistance for a woman student.

Belva A. Lockwood Memorial Scholarship. The income of this fund given in memory of Belva A. Lockwood provides tuition assistance for a woman student.

CLEO Program. The Law School participates with the Council on Legal Education Opportunity to assist disadvantaged students who successfully complete the summer institutes sponsored by CLEO.

Loan Funds, intended to meet tuition expenses and to permit repayment after graduation or under other suitable conditions, are available under the following major programs:

National Defense Education Act Loans
United Student Aid, Inc., Loan Program
The American Bar Association Fund for Legal Education
Federal Communications Bar Association Loan Program
Foundation of the American College of Trial Lawyers
Loan Program
Lawyers' Wives of the District of Columbia Foundation
Loans

The Deferred Tuition Plan of The American University permits properly qualified students to make their tuition payments in three equal installments during each semester rather than in full at the beginning of each semester. There is a small service charge associated with payments under this plan.

Veterans' Benefits for law study expenses are available under Public Law 89-358 (Veterans' Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966), or the previously existing Public Laws, P.L. 84-634 (War Orphans), P.L. 88-361 (Children of Disabled Veterans), and P.L. No. 87-815 (Disabled Veterans). Applications for these benefits should be filed with the Veterans Administration prior to enrollment, and a Certificate of Eligibility from the V.A. must be presented to the Veterans' Counselor at the University during registration.
